Q: PHP Hex Colors not rendering I've been working in a web project that uses some hex colors. However when I view it in my web browser the hex colors are very light (almost clear) and the background color is white. In Chrome the colors are very light as well, but in Firefox, they are very dark. Here is the CSS: `body { background: #000; } p.important { color: #e75d3d; } h1 { color: #ec6250; } a { color: #aeaea9; }` Here is the HTML: `This is important. Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consectetur adipiscing elit. Nullam tortor mauris, consectetur eu interdum eget, gravida id magna. Aliquam non sagittis elit. Mauris id tortor massa, eget volutpat lorem. Quisque bibendum accumsan nibh, consectetur porttitor risus accumsan id. Maecenas viverra hendrerit egestas. Fusce auctor accumsan metus, eget pretium diam. Pellentesque nec accumsan dolor. Nulla eget justo ipsum. Vivamus quis libero a lacus rhoncus accumsan. Aliquam auctor accumsan turpis vitae ullamcorper. Ut eget nulla odio.` Hello Hello If I turn on fiddle to see it in action I get this: (Note: In Chrome I get the correct colors. However Firefox is too light.) Now, I have tried installing Firebug, which comes with Firefox, and even with that, Firebug does not show the color as expected. A:

This is the third post in my series where I examine the statistics behind the 2012 NFL Draft. The statistics that I am using come from Pro Football Reference, which is the official statistics provider for the NFL. I will be using the site's play-by-play version. For a detailed breakdown on what I have analyzed, click here. What I am going to do is break down the draft from the perspective of a quarterback. For quarterbacks, there are three main stats that are going to be examined for each round: The number of times in the draft that a quarterback lasted that particular round; Total yards of passes thrown in the round; and Total yards per attempt. Obviously the number of teams that drafted a quarterback is important too. For that reason, I'll also be looking at the correlation between rounds and the percentage of picks that were a quarterback. A positive relationship indicates that as more picks fall in a particular round, the more quarterbacks that are drafted. Part 1 of this analysis focused on the total number of quarterbacks drafted, the total number of times each quarterback lasted a certain round, and the number of seasons since each quarterback last lasted that particular round. I found no significant correlations between any of the three statistics and the rounds in which quarterbacks were drafted. Part 2 focused on the total number of times that a quarterback in each round lasted in the NFL. Here, I found that a quarterback lasted at a higher rate in the third round and lower rate in the fourth round than in the first or second round. I also found that the rate of a quarterback lasting in a round had an increasing trend from year to year. If you would like to see Part 2 in its entirety, click here. So this is the final part of my series. For this article, I am going to be taking a look at the total number of times that quarterbacks have lasted in the first three rounds of the draft in the last eight years. If you want to take a look at it all in one place, click here. The following chart plots the last eight years of the total number of quarterbacks that have lasted in the first three rounds in the NFL. As you can see, since 2009 the first round of the NFL Draft only has produced two quarterbacks. The first of these two quarterbacks was Joe Flacco, who was drafted by the Baltimore Ravens in the first round of the 2008 draft, the least successful quarterback drafted in the first three rounds of the last eight years.
